This email brings Big News for researchers interested in Working Time Reduction / the four-day week.

We have three announcements: the launch of a new network for researchers, a mini-conference on working time reduction and a series of webinars on the latest four-day week research.

1   The new research network is called the "Working Time Reduction Research Network" or WTR-RN. All is explained on our new website, www.wtr-rn.com where you can find out about the network, the steering committee and sign up as a member. For the first year, membership fees are optional for salaried researchers and free for research students.

2   This network is organising a mini-conference on working time reduction at the SASE conference in Limerick, Ireland June 27-29 2024. There is still time, just, to submit abstracts, deadline 19th January. Visit https://sase.org/event/2024-limerick/#submissions and select the mini-conference MC01: Working Time Reduction: Towards a More Balanced, Just and Sustainable Economic Life.

3   As part of the launch of the new network there will be a program of webinars. The first in the series is "Do four-day week employee well-being improvements affect company outcomes?" by ▮▮▮▮▮▮▮▮▮▮▮▮▮▮▮▮
▮▮▮▮▮ at 3pm GMT on Thursday 1 February. https://us02web.zoom.us/j/83927042296?pwd=WGpZM3BDMmRkcGJMWWFvUG42L2VSZz09

Meeting ID: 839 2704 2296

Please forward this email to colleagues with and interest in working time reduction.
For further details, or if you have any hitches with any of the technology (the website has just been launched) please email

From the WTR-RN Steering Committee
Boston College
European Trade Union Institute
University College Dublin
University of Salford
University of Salford
Boston College

University of Cambridge
IRISSO-University Paris Dauphine